

The Image of Prince George: Key Physical Form Elements that Define the Structure and Perception of the City

-  Paths: the streets, sidewalks, trails and other channels in which people travel
-  Edges: perceived boundaries and physical barriers both natural and built such as escarpments, major roads, and shorelines
-  Districts: relatively large sections of the city distinguished by some identity or character, for which one knows when they are entering or leaving.
-  Landmarks: readily identifiable objects which serve as external reference points
-  Nodes: focal points, intersections, or loci.

Coordinate System: NAD 1983 UTM Zone 10N
Map scaled to 1:50,000 when printed at 11"x17"
Produced: 6/23/2011

Community Identity

Official Community Plan

